

‘El[egy for the [Fallen]’

‘The world is governed by very different personages from what is imagined by those who are not behind the scenes.’

- Benjamin Disraeli

Having figuratively ‘gotten [Is]s’ number’, discerned her scheme, much of her organizing symbolism, and established with certainty that she and the entire apostate system are on a counter-Divine Will basis, along with the fact that in order to apply the Divine’s Law to ‘SWIT’ Me they necessarily, if grudgingly, have to ‘get’ My consent in a manner that Divine Law will indeed convict and that’s not going to happen, I’ve been about done ‘catching up with’ and processing the manifest situation and starting to evaluate how to fairly and legitimately attend to it. Careful assessment, critical thinking, extrapolation from Natural Law principles, and noticing discrepancies and incongruencies in for example [Is]s’ non-overtly implied premise have been exceedingly practical and effective. In essence, applying and extrapolating out from Divine Will principles and what is essentially Common Law have exposed the hypocrisies and caused a thousands-years-old international fraud scheme against Me specifically and individually, or at least any single individual against Whom they’ve opted to apply it, to implode in the figurative light of common sense. That wasn’t Me doing it; that was the Divine. All I did was apply Its basic principles and Work in confluence with It. As opposed to, say, trusting whatever I was told and organizing My Choices and actions exclusively around My own ego. Anyone can do it. Most don’t. I’ve been appreciating how effective it can be when they do. And what inevitably results for them when they don’t.

It’s a basic principle of law that, ‘An agent must represent his principal.’ The apostate system is certainly representing theirs; the merest glance at the news proves this. How best to represent Mine, Divine Will? Particularly in a situation like this, in which practically everyone else is either unaware, willfully ignorant, or systematically collusive? Not a whole lot of freedom of agency, under the circumstances, however temporary those are. Still, those others are in a position in which the natural structure and principles of Creation aren't in their favor, or more accurately they're in a position that's in opposition to them. Seems like even a single individual actively Working in confluence with those principles ought to be able to accomplish quite a bit, since they have the figurative 'home team advantage'. A counter-Divine Will basis is foreign and opposed to everything in Creation including existence itself. I reviewed what the situation has put in My favor.

In her systematic efforts to try to 'nb My soI', [Is]s has gotten the rank and file personnel practically filling all over each other to try to orient on Me and attempt to entice Me onto a counter-Divine Will basis, whether through bribery or getting Me to do some less-than-legitimate 'resstance' shenanigans. A lost cause on both those counts, but at least it means I have their attention. That results in certain opportunities for mentorship of and ministering to them, to try to get them sorted out. People don't Choose a counter-Divine Will basis and its resultants for no reason, and of course there's no reason that's sufficient ultimately. People just seem to be not thinking, as the overt electoral base amply illustrates. They're unlikely to get the missing answers from the apostate system for obvious reasons, so I'm able to provide them with an exceedingly rare commodity. Then there's the [h]oney][p]t scheme that she's been pulling, having people fraudulently attempt to gain influence and manipulate Me under the auspices of a rom[antic or intensely personal rel]ationship. And that's not figuratively '*a one-way str*uct'; within reasonable limits it allows for certain recognized non-overt leniencies which can make that mentoring and ministering even more effective. Hmm, interesting. And indeed, how much can a person truly l[ive] another and yet leave them to their own self-d[estruction and the d]estruction of others? Let alone exacerbate both, as the apostate system tends to do. Therefore, some very worthwhile and legitimate opportunities for Me to represent My Principal there.

Some of the results have been less than encouraging, and even utterly b[affling]. People understanding the situation, having read these exposure pieces, watched as I put the evidence together, seen the apostate system organizing, and witnessing [Is]s' 'time machine' handiwork for themselves. And quite competent to make the assessment as to where it comes from and what counter-Divine Will interests have been providing it. Yet their continuing recalcitrance and refusal to divist of it and pull clear from it. Why? Like, what possible sufficient reason could there even be to do that. From here it seems utterly mad. Two hundred or so years ago we had the country filled with a People who recognized Natural Law, God-given rights, and the absolute need for a system which upholds them. Two centuries plus of Babylon's incremental subversion campaign, and we've got people quite willing to 'sell out' to a counter-Divine Will basis knowingly, willfully and avoidably in return for... what exactly? The 'benefits' proffered by the apostate system come at the Ultimate Cost, and are either things that any functional overt law system wouldn't prohibit in the first place or they're trinkets that come from violations of the rights of your fellow man. The former we'd have freely-obtainable anyway, and the latter it's inconsistent with our True Nature to genuinely want. So I've been figuratively grappling with that, but come up completely short on any sufficient how or why anyone could do that. And that doesn't exactly leave Me in much of a position to assist or provide relevant counsel.

Nevertheless, determined to figuratively use My head as something more than just a [d]rstop, it got Me doing a very careful assessment and deduction session regarding the hows and whys of the whole apostate system again given the stuff I'd found out about [Is]s semi-recently. And it caused Me to notice a discrepancy, an incongruity, that I hadn't before. Those are always interesting, because they're usually the start of some new finding that wasn't immediately obvious. Like her ability to 'see ahead' in time and retroactively alter events for example, but her non-overtly stated limitation that she 'can't actually use it to sort things out'. That never added up, but I was patient on the basis of limited information and had to infer 'duress' on her part. The answer to that one was even more interesting: she's on a counter-Divine Will basis and getting her mad from principals who actually want all that awfulness, which is why the organization keeps causing it.

So reader, follow the reasoning here and decide what you think about it. She's out for My soul, right. She's on a counter-Divine Will basis, sure whatever. She has the ability to 'see ahead' in time and knows the results in advance. Got it. And then over last year, absolutely insisted on a prioritization and course of action that would utterly blow her alibi with Me and screw up her effort to gain My soul, because she gave herself away. How much sense does that seem to make? She wants a thing, then deliberately insists on doing things that will utterly keep her from acquiring it. And could see that it would do just that. And did it anyway. What the... what?

So I started to worry away at the incongruity with deduction and critical reasoning, evaluating various likely motives. The most oversold by [Is■s] would of course be, 'There's disloyalty and resistance happening from within! Dissension among the ranks of [Is■s]!' Which of course was a complete non-starter that didn't even stand up to a moment's scrutiny. Because not only would she by definition be aware of it, she'd be aware of it in advance and be able to pre-empt it. She's got those 'perks' from those counter-Divine Will-predicated 'fallen angels', and by definition an intra-[Is■s] 'resistance' would have them rescinded. Even if there were a personnel desire to, those 'fallen angels' have illustrated their ability to cause drastic 'parnormal disturbances' when it's strategically useful to them; getting personnel who've already forfeit their own 'sol■s', which is the purpose of the organization, to suddenly also then lose their temporal lives by what'd appear overtly as some 'fuck accident' or 'awful criminal tragedy' would be a very easy matter to arrange. Not that it would be effective or particularly useful against former personnel who'd renounced a counter-Divine Will basis, repented, and gotten back with Divine Will; temporal lives are fleeting, inconsequential in comparison with Eternal Life, and so the organization needs 'sol■' defection onto a counter-Divine Will basis, straight-up just 'ganking' people wouldn't be sufficient. But those on a legitimate Divine Will-aligned basis wouldn't be 'in on' the membership 'perks' that [Is■s] personnel get, specifically mind-reading and seeing through time, nor would they be presenting themselves as [Is■s] loyalists and striving for some illegitimate 'resistance' effort from there. So no matter how you figure it, it just doesn't withstand scrutiny.

Therefore, her personnel are counter-Divine Will loyalists. Whatever they're attempting to present as, overtly or non-. Which is pretty intense, given that she can 'see' for herself just how much trouble with Divine Will she's in. The figurative mental 'leap' she's doing there does worry Me a bit, for her sake. Insisting on a counter-Divine Will basis when she not only knows it's unconscionably morally wrong - most of the organization's personnel do that - but can see the imminent stop and the results too, much better than they can. A rejection of not only [life] and the easily-inferable facts of the matter, but the results that she can clearly 'see' herself, in advance. Therefore, stymying amounts of willful recklessness on her part, but nevertheless [Is■s] personnel remain counter-Divine Will loyalists.

Alright, what other potential motive then? 'Directly-conflicting agenda items.' I mean... sort of? There's been evidence of this throughout. Predicated on a counter-Divine Will basis, her 'sub-division' is out for My soul, and indeed that of anyone Who's been selected for her 'special attentions' because the ordinary stuff for Average Joe won't cut it. But the rest of the organization 'needs' to keep wreaking havoc, degrading the masses, subverting and collapsing healthy public morals, fair and just governments, and so on. In My last I'd referenced the mutually-exclusive nature of those agenda items with gaining My soul, because it totally removes any basis for trust and credibility. But again, we have a situation in which she can 'see ahead' and knows full well they're mutually-exclusive. And despite self-evidently being 'the hidden authority figure group within the organization', whom all the other little franchises must listen to, heed and obey, wreaking that havoc has taken priority over gaining My soul. As I'd mentioned, they want My soul but 'they're on a budget'. They're only willing to allocate effort for it to a minor amount, while plenty is expended to the 'wreaking havoc' budget. Either the organization wants it, or not. Apparently these inherently conflicting priorities in agenda items also represent a limitation on her clout and influence within the organization. Necessarily because they're all on a counter-Divine Will basis and their 'principal' there isn't a franchise of humans. It's those 'fallen angels', from whom she's been getting her 'perks'. She 'works' for them.

The 'mutually-exclusive agenda items' problem appears to have come from there.

If it hadn't, if she'd had full authority within the organization, she likely would have been able to find some means of 'harmonizing' the agenda items to a certain extent, at least temporarily, and perhaps for long enough to keep the incongruities of the situation and her position from becoming quite so blatantly noticeable until it was too late. But she didn't. They appear to have countermanded her on it.

I started considering the position of those 'fallen angels'. Not easy to do given how they don't put in much of an appearance tangibly and there's very little we know about them. I contemplated the consistently awful temporal results of their handiwork via the activities of the organization. The unconscionable suffering and injustice they've been inciting the humans to produce through the ages, even in our era under the auspices of totalitarian regimes and needless supposed 'wars'. These guys definitely have some major animosity towards the humans. I thought back to the scrying effort I'd done with that 'man-slaying' entity from Solomon's Goitia, thinking to get some recourse to the 'cause striking' that was of course just [Is], and how what I was getting was just this massive, intense rancor and resentment to the utmost power. Not just towards the intended victim, but towards Myself, and humanity in total. That just seemed fundamentally wrong enough that I had to abandon the effort; I'd sensed intuitively that some purported 'solutions' come at too great a cost, leaving themselves less than pointless. But that encounter stuck with Me, and became a datapoint here. These guys were, are, indescribably angry and resentful of humanity, and want nothing but to see us all cease to exist permanently at the first opportunity. And the humans of the apostate system have been 'working' for them.

What could put their positions into some kind of rational context? What did humans do that would make them so utterly resentful of us, let alone each of us individually? Ah, right. Expelled from Heaven, condemned to Divine Judgement, with only a limited time here in this temporal sandbox. While humans have the opportunity to accept realignment with Divine Will, reconciliation, enter Heaven and have Eternal Life in a fair, Just system with the Perfect Ultimate Benevolent Authority Figure Who enforces both Love and Law, neither of which the apostate system can tolerate let alone offer. So these guys are in 'Ultimate Pout Mode', and to some extent understandably; I likely would be too if I had screwed Myself out of everything I'd ever truly wanted and there was no hope of ever getting it back. And so these guys are famously proud, stubborn, headstrong, outraged, principles-free, agenda-motivated and quite willing to take it out on us. Amoral nihilists with superhuman abilities, eons of experience, and plenty of strategy, intellect and low cunning. And they're out for, er, either 'revenge' or some metaphysical equivalent of hostile-taking that would 'force' the Divine to revise His Law and let them back in.

Alright, getting a fair assessment of the sort of guys I'm encountering here. They seem to have a fairly empathizable position, they're at odds with all of Creation, they're the epitome of ego-oriented, accepting no Law but their own desires, they don't give a thing for principles, they're condemned, and they're extremely intelligent. As in, intelligent enough to have built the apostate system as a human amplifier apparatus for their agendas, defraud mankind about what ‘magick’ is and isn’t, and willing to put in some effort appearing to serve us in order to accomplish their ambitions. They’ve adopted an unconscionable and flawed position, but they are extremely intelligent. Intelligent enough to see the flaws in their position. And the situation has given Me, quite unasked, their direct and system-wide attention.

I was beginning to see how a single individual, aligned with Divine Will, in this situation could make quite a contribution in mentoring and ministering. Providing counsel. Because if ever there was the epitome of the ‘arrogant rebellious anti-authoritarian teenager’ archetype, it’s these guys. The ultimate in ‘troubled youth’, however ancient.

I wasn’t entirely convinced I’d be able to provide them with any counsel they hadn’t already considered in their long existences. But their adoption of an unconscionable position, and utter insistence on it for thousands of years, suggested that one of us clearly knew something the other had missed. An opportunity for learning either why, I suppose. And one never knows until one tries! Traditional received wisdom attributed to Napoleon is to ‘Never interrupt your enemy when he’s making a mistake.’ Strategically expedient, but worryingly morally dubious. There are situations in which being your ‘enemy’ or your ‘opponent’ is the mistake, and can and should be sorted out. When the deviation is from Divine Will, that’s always the case. That’s how Creation is structured, with a benevolent centralized Ultimate Authority Who Emplaces foundational principles and then everything else extrapolates out from that. Natural Law, as objectively real as physics. So clearly someone involved here, either they or I, had figuratively ‘gotten their sums wrong’.

Throughout the apostate system’s interference with Me to gain either My acceptance or My illegitimate ‘resistance’, I’d noticed a slightly worrying tendency on even [Is]s’ part to ignore My motives in planning her actions. I don’t mean emotional callousness, which isn’t of particular concern to her, but rather in the sense of logistical ineffectiveness and impracticality, which most certainly does. Now that I’ve been able to ascertain what she’s been up to it’s a little more comprehensible; she’s been attempting to implement the organization’s thousands-years-old [Is]-[Horus]-[Osiris] script, a sort of playbook for ‘special cases’ Who don’t buy into a counter-Divine Will basis like the crowds tend to. Essentially she's been methodically implementing that script like a telemarketer, because of course for all her talents she's effectively just another 'script kiddie'. They get their directives from those 'fallen angels', who of course have that major resentment problem. They're necessarily going to have a lack of compassion towards us, and not exactly regard us as other creatures as they are. If they had their druthers they wouldn't even have to interact with us at all; we'd be destroyed already. So they grudgingly 'work' the established formula: they put the 'yummies' in, to get the 'solids' out. Or get humans to do it for them.

We've established that a counter-Divine Will basis is fundamentally lacking in both genuine Love, and genuine Law. This evidence pattern appears to again corroborate that. So as a representative of the Divine Who doesn't lack those things, I don't want to make the same error they've been making throughout. Without genuine Love genuine compassion is impossible. But how to have compassion for a group of, er, 'people' I guess, who are at war against everything legitimate in Creation and want the whole of humanity destroyed permanently? They're intelligent, so nothing they do is without reason. Their agenda items, and the apostate system's routine awfulness in its accomplishments, suggest not a lack of intelligence but rather a piteously warped minds~~it~~. Piety is a derivative of compassion, and understanding their motivations is necessary to address them effectively. When [Isa]s' knowing, willful and avoidable counter-Divine Will basis had become unavoidably evident, those 'fallen angels' as her principals seemed essentially synonymous and interchangeable with a counter-Divine Will basis. Yet as we're all creations from the Divine, it's nobody's inherent True Nature to adopt a counter-Divine Will basis. 'Principal and agent' again. Doesn't mean they manifestly haven't; they self-evidently have! But it makes their motives for that Choice figuratively very tenuous indeed, so far removed from their True Nature that there's a major inherent internal conflict there, and in assessing the situation that puts their 'motive' front and center to all this.

That gave Me a place to start. What do we know about the motives of 'fallen angels'? Plenty. Resentment and rebellion against the Divine. Willing to produce any expedient calumnies and other untrustworthy rhetoric to oppose that Divine. Seeking to destroy humanity, not just temporally but in a 'permanent' sense, to either 'get back at' the Creator or to use them as figurative leverage to 'force' Him to revise His Law. Ego-oriented, effectively Loveless, full of ambition. The very definition of stubborn. Unconcerned with harms caused to accomplish their agendas. [F]re, essentially. I've known people like that; intensely p[er]missionate. A propensity to be recklessly and ruthlessly dr[iven]. Knowing no law but their own ego and, when absolutely necessary, that of expediency by temporarily accepting externally-imposed authority when it was unavoidable. Those individuals have been admirable in having such intense 'verve' in life. However it was accompanied by an inherent vulnerability, a risk of 'verving' themselves full-force into the nearest wall, figuratively speaking. But like all our True Natures they come with strengths which can be maximized, and inherent weaknesses that can be either mitigated or completely overcome. I was 'getting' the archetype here, and had a baseline model for these 'fallen angels'.

So let's see here. We know the Divine is never unfair, let alone unLoving. They rejected His Law and Ultimate Authority because they wanted more. Or what they perceived as 'more' than what they were given, at least. They got expelled from the Perfect, True State of Creation for it, into this figurative shambles. Now they're on what they must regard as an excessively unworthy junkyard, with nothing of any genuine value, when of course they know that they deserve so much better. Outraged? You know it. From their perspective they've got nothing worthwhile to have or do, and they're just waiting to be permanently thrown away by the Divine. All they have is a bunch of no-option options, and not a hope in Creation for anything of actual value ever again. I'd be pretty disenfranchised by that too. But they're stuck here with the equivalent of some tiny, insignificant insect species which, to add insult to injury, the Divine Lives very much and is even Willing to have take their place in Heaven, where the 'fallen angels' themselves aren't allowed! How galling! So all these guys are able to do is bash various bits of this worthless junkyard together against each other, and try to use it to permanently eradicate the native species using the Divine's Own Law to do it. Either as an act of revenge, or as hostage-taking, 'terrorist extremism' to attempt to force a Divine policy change, I'm not sure which. And they've been throwing themselves into it for at least the last seven thousand years.

Alright, we've got the broad strokes. We 'get' the motive. So now we do a figurative 'what's wrong with this picture?' on it, evaluating for mistakes and errors. I couldn't but think of the blasphemous and monstrously erroneous model of God that Calvinism presented: that the Divine Made a tiny, very select number of pre-intended to be Saved and pass the Judgement, and all the other humans pre-intended to be thrown away. If you're to be Saved it's inherent and it'll happen regardless, supposedly, and if you're to be unSaved there's nothing you can do about that either. You know, the religiosity equivalent of the racism hype that the apostate system has been selling all manner of ethnicities for thousands of years to any segment of the demographic stupid and morally repellant enough to buy into it. So the model of the Divine that the 'fallen angels' have been using is that of Him being so utterly lacking in Love that it's very much out of character for Him. 'But the fallen angels are condemned by the Law!' Yes, and so were the humans. Yet we saw Him being extraordinarily patient with them, not ending them back in Eden, giving them Law, giving them counsel, attempting to coax them to grow, giving them a system of Atonement, freeing them from slavery, and only eventually accepting their defection from Him reluctantly after thousands of years, and then making sure to Establish yet another opportunity for reconciliation on an individual basis for any human willing to do so! He's been consistently illustrating His Law, His Love, and His Position throughout all of this. And so have the 'fallen angels'.

I've learned a few 'shortcuts' or 'rules of thumb' about people in My years on this planet. To a great extent from watching the strategies of the apostate system to defraud them. For example:

People generally see what they want to see. That is, they'll interpret what they encounter in whatever context makes the most sense to them, from where they're at. The less they're interested in what the truth in fact is, the less motivated they'll be to scrutinize and evaluate what's actually there. When they're completely morally bankrupt you get zealotry and reflexive 'fake news!' rejections of anything they find inconvenient. Their loyalty to their ego has effectively usurped their loyalty to truth or fairness; they're living almost completely in their own self-delusion, and to their own massive risk and detriment both individually and collectively.

People tend to assume that other people are more or less like themselves. Not their Divinely-conferred True Nature typically, but rather the misperception of themselves their own ego has given them. After all, when we model other people we tend to use the model with which we're most familiar: ourselves. That's part of why I'd given [Is]s for example 'the benefit of the doubt' for so long despite the evidence of her knowing, willful and avoidable rejection of Divine Will and True Nature; it was incomprehensible to Me that anyone competent would do that, so of course it had to be something else. Part of it of course was also that per Duty to Divine Will, I have the 'duty of due diligence' to give others a fair assessment.

So we see God enforcing His Law with the humans, but temp[er]ing it generously with His Love and looking for, finding, or even Creating multiple 'outs' and options for them if only they'll use their opportunity to Reconcile with Him again. That's the D[uty] I know! That's His True Nature, and He's been sh[owing] it to us all throughout. So how reasonable, how evidence-based, is it for these 'fallen angels' to infer that while He L[oves] His widdle humans, He could hardly care less about the 'fallen angels' that He Created too? No options, no recourse, no opportunity for reconciliation, just cast out into some little petri dish somewhere to await their Ultimate D[estruction]? That just 'doesn't tr[ack].'

But it's a misperception that's certainly consistent with those 'rules of thumb' I'd presented. I've known some pretty stubborn and obstinate humans occasionally. Take that and compound it with tho[us]ands of years of sc[orn]ful nihilism and the result is necessarily g[oing] to be an increasingly intense amount of 'willful blindness'. They're unL[oving], so 'of course' God is unL[oving] too. They know no Law but expedience, so 'obviously' His Law is necessarily just as whimsical, point[less], arbitrary and open to revision if only they can make it sufficiently expedient for Him to revise it. They just have to apply sufficient force and verve, that's all. 'Moar verve! Moar oomph!'

Meanwhile His illustrated Nature presents that if these 'fallen angels' had the desire for Reconciliation, He would furnish opportunities just as He did with the humans. But if their mental model of Him is worryingly sk[ewed], they're necessarily going to completely miss that. So they just keep manifestly compounding their error, and their resultant Liability for same.

From what does their error derive? A holl[own]ness in the heart and in the so[ul]. A rejection of L[ove], and of Law, in preference for something else instead. Ego, or expediency, or agenda items, or whatever. And so they neither L[ove] the Divine, nor 'L[ove] their neighbor as themselves'. Even when they deployed an entire, major subd[ivision] of humans to try to get Me to forfeit My so[ul], they didn't take the time or the effort to acknowledge My motives and just kept trying and retrying various fraud scr[ipts]. In fact they manifestly still are. Inexpedient and ineffective as that was and is.

Could anyone genuinely L■ving adopt the position of doing to people what the apostate system routinely does to them every d■y? So in continuing to throw themselves into that counter-Divine Will-predicated agenda of causing awfulness and injustice, all they're doing is 'bl■wing their own alibi' and disproving their own accusations against the Divine. They're proving out the reason for the Judgement against them. They're inadvertently validating the party they're opposing.

From His illustrated Nature, we have every reason to infer that He'd provide them with some recourse out of L■ve if only they would self-corr■ct. But even in the rather unlikely situation that He didn't, regardless of the outcome, who could accept being career awful, systematically unconscionable, to people? Even if ceasing that didn't provide a means for Reconciliation, what entity could manage to stom■ch doing it regardless? Only an entity lacking in genuine L■ve. And to reject that L■ve which is their True Nature, and any Law but expediency, necessarily is that same Choice to reject the Divine. He doesn't want their compliance only to achieve a desired agenda item; that would just be expediency again. He wants their genuine Choice for L■ve and His Law! So this appears to be a test for them, and one which they've been flubbing admirably for the last few tho■sand years. Lack of L■ve, producing that 'willful bl■ndness', resulting in an ever-compounding liability, causing them to by their own Choice lose the only thing they ever genuinely wanted in the first place. Because they're convinced that they've already lost it, so 'Hmmf. M■ght as well, then.'

Figuratively, the Divine could have sn■pped His fingers and mass ext■minated these guys instantly. He expelled them into a little s■ndb■x instead. Have they ever stopped to consider why that is? Natural Law presents the Duty of 'due diligence'. You know, from which we get concepts like 'right to a fair trial' and 'innocent until proven guilty'. Has it never occurred to these guys that figuratively, 'the jury is still out'? And that, worryingly, they're thr■wing away the very thing that matters to them, and whose perceived irretrievable loss has been making them so outr■ged in the first place? Somewhat amusingly given their deployment of [Is■s] against Me, these guys appear by all the available evidence to be the vict■ms of a 'self-fulfilling proph■cy'.

And speaking of, interesting that the Bible's prophetic symbolism refers to them as 'cast into the bottomless pit'. You know, away from the direction of Heaven, into a state of increasing dissociation from the True State of Creation. Does that sound a little bit like a metaphor for self-delusion to you, reader? Incidentally, that's a Biblical prophecy so it hasn't happened yet. This suggests time for even these guys to self-correct. At a guess, wouldn't the Close of Probation for the humans seem like the appropriate juncture for it to close for the 'fallen angels' too? It's effectively when 'God calls time' and Divine Intervention puts a stop to all this, after all.

I could understand why the humans don't get it; most of them have never understood the basic premise or formula of what's happening to them. But these 'fallen angels' know full well better; they've seen God. And not just the awfulness that the apostate system puts out among humanity, but most of their strategies and methods and rhetoric and formulae derive from these 'fallen angels'. Meaning in order to formulate, package and deploy them against the humans, these 'fallen angels' would necessarily have to have thought them up, crafted and devised each major fraud, and so on. They know full well better! So what keeps them from snapping out of it themselves? It's not a lack of knowledge! It's that Loveless 'willful blindness' I was on about. So from what I'm able to assess, most humans couldn't show them better, since they lack a familiarity with the situation because these guys have been systematically defrauding us. And for all their millennia of existence, these 'fallen angels' can have limitations too, that we can or should lack, due to a basic lack of Love and a Choice for self-delusion because they're orbiting their own ego at the expense of the facts and the truth of the matter. It would require one of their own who redeveloped sufficient Love to put them onto it, or a human who'd somehow gained enough familiarity with the situation to get it. And who didn't 'sell out', buy into that [Osiris] nonsense and get corrupted, and who had sufficient Love and Law alignment to not only 'get' it but put it together for these 'fallen angels'. And then it would have to be Someone Who had their full and systematic attention. So it appears that humans have a faculty these guys lack, or at least refuse to apply, specifically to recognize things those 'blind spots' keep them from noticing. Meaning they have limits we don't. Having existed for thousands of years at minimum they're not exactly [minors], but the result still appears to amount to them being effectively 'non compos mentis' in that sense.

It 'clicked' for Me that everything we're seeing them use the apostate system to get the humans to do to each other, is like an externalized projection of what these 'fallen angels' are doing to themselves. The way they seem to view themselves, represented. It's like watching someone with a broken mind have their traumas played out externally, in miniature, projected as media. Only we're living in it. Which is pretty wild; getting the humans to 'sell out' for stuff these guys already know is worthless, that all it will cause is their own destruction, the tricks and the traps and the propaganda and the fraud, which these guys know has no substance nor legitimacy. They pull these stratagems on the humans but it's a metaphor of what they're pulling on themselves. How do they not notice the correlation? That 'willful blindness', worryingly. The same kind of worrying hypocrisy that keeps the MAGA voter base supporting the violation of God-given rights, convinced that instead it will 'restore the country.' Self-delusion, only made possible by abandoning core principles. Suddenly all the strategies I've been seeing from the apostate system began to look more like detailed schematics of the nature of the spiritual problems involved, perpetuated by the implementation of the morally 'fallen' humans systematically implementing them. Of course there's a limit to the detail of information we can reliably infer from it; everything on a counter-Divine Will basis is necessarily untrustworthy, because there's neither Love nor Law there. But the most effective untruths are based in something true; nearly all science fiction is message-based about something that is happening, or likely will happen, around us if only we knew the context. I'm in-process of carefully, and cautiously, evaluating this whole 'layer' of 'counter-Divine Will schematics' to determine whether it's feasible to psychoanalyze where these guys, 'the sulk crew', are at from it. But a lapse of Love and Law within them seems to be the core item, and I definitely wanted to get the basic idea out first. Much of the reason for which I'll get to in a moment.

And then amidst their whole system and all their formulas, there was Me. Whom they've symbolized as a [kitsune], someone who 'doesn't fit into their schema'. A 'special case', requiring 'special attention and efforts'. Who, per their model, is to be duped and defrauded until eventually they accept a counter-Divine Will basis. Someone representing Divine Will, the antithesis to their whole current premise. In terms of their externalized projection of their own psychoanalytical problem, if ever there was someone who could jostle their thinking and figuratively get their mental needle to jump from its current groove where it's evidently stuck, that would be Me or someone else in an equivalent position.

Their chance at Reconciliation, and even that they've been figuratively throwing away by attempting to systematically defraud them. Yes, that certainly tracks.

I started to use mental metaphors and associations to get at various concepts. The nature of a martial arts [joint lock] occurred to Me; a limit on the freedom of [rotation] in order to assertively stop an assailant and halt a [life]-threatening conflict, all using the strategic application of the forces and structures involved. One lone individual, Working in harmony with the nature of the situation, doesn't have to apply a lot of force. Because the whole situation, even the True Nature of the assailant himself, are all designed to Work to his advantage. Either the assailant stops, or makes the Choice to persist to his own increasing limitation. Because the logistical implications of the 'blind spots' resulting from an inherent lack of Love would surely have strategical applications if necessary; telepathy and other mojo aren't everything. And ultimately those Choosing a counter-Divine Will basis are 'only hurting themselves'; I don't need to apply force, particularly under the circumstances when the apostate system's various fraud campaigns have precluded the Lawful and legitimate application of earthly force, because the Divine will attend to the matter regardless. And with vastly more force than I could apply. In the interim while the option's been precluded I'm under no Duty to do the impossible; can't convene Lawful juries of the People when the People are so baffled and shiftless.

And so all this 'clicked' together for Me as I was evaluating it, on the Sabbath just after Babylon's 'Winter Solstice'. Interesting how that happened.

As I was putting it together, I of course knew that [Isa]s was getting it down and so, necessarily, the 'fallen angels' were too. I clarified that there was no necessity nor desire for [Isa]s to do anything about it, nor reply or respond to it. Any 'fallen angels' Choosing Reconciliation would either make themselves known to Me, or wouldn't and I'd only find out post-Judgement when accredited with honors for having assisted them with it. Man, if people are given honors for assisting the rescue of their fellow humans, just think what honors they'd get for assisting the 'fallen' with it! Also pretty interesting how it got passed to them by Someone Who just happened to know enough of the situation, and have their 'special attention', like a little hint or spoiler passed along by the Divine to one of His representatives. I could see that. He's continually presented the situation via Natural Law, and then additionally presented it explicitly in text form to make sure we have every opportunity to get it. You know. For clarity. Like just the sort of thing I do.

Pause. Clear disclaimer.

I'm going to openly present media instances I'd associated with during these insights, as metaphor and for completion. Also, unfortunately, as evidence. Because what I'd found was [Is]s, true to form, 'getting in on the act' unnecessarily and doing her usual antics: throwing in all manner of unnecessary counter-Divine Will declarator symbols, attempting to 'lead' My thought patterns into illegitimate 'resistance' incitement stuff, 'negging' and subtle - and unsubtle - abuse, and what appears to be a consistent effort to misapply certain 'interpersonal relationship'-specific imagery and symbolism to give specific people close to Me very much the wrong idea. I need to make it plain that that was [Is]s, not Me. And I need to emphasize that she'd added that, disregard it. I've learned and indeed been conditioned to 'free associate', and with [Is]s et. al there's never any concern about My intent because she knows it, and knows that I know she knows it, etc. But when I have to present it openly and publicly I'm aware that others don't have that certainty, so there's a Duty on My part for clarity about it. Just being fair. It's great that some of us have a clear enough conscience and position that we're able to directly gainfully that stuff overtly, which can and by rights should be sufficient.

Resuming.

Mentally rummaging around for metaphors to exemplify the concepts, I thought of the plight of the little exocomps from that episode of 'Star Trek: The Next Generation'. You know, the [electronic] [plug] things. Because we tend to remember things broadly, the storyline did seem to co-align with the concepts and so did the organizing symbolism - My "House"'s proprietary use of the [robot] symbol as a one-off 'inversion', and [plugs] being associated with short-term worldly success, but incrementally getting [flat]ter and [flat]ter until their destruction is pretty much a forgone conclusion; they figuratively 'get the chop', and that was of course the plan all along. But I don't usually remember all the details, and only get those again when I rewatch the media. And that's where usually [Is]s throws in her contributions; choices of phrasing, meaningful pauses and emphasis, minor characterization and subplots, etc.. The more I recollect the 'big ideas' of the ep, the more likely it seemed that [Isis] had made it in direct reply to this research on My part. How curious. I certainly hadn't needed her to, nor do I trust her, nor indeed is there much relevant about it that she can do; I was after all 'talking to the organ grinder' instead, and this stuff was 'above her paygrade'. What could she possibly contribute here? Nevertheless, Duty to Divine Will and man required Me to allow her the opportunity to speak her piece; that's only fair. 'Due diligence', 'the right to speak in ones' own defense', 'the right to counsel', etc.. So, off to rewatch an episode of 'Star Trek' I guess. All per Duty to Divine Will. It's a strange calling sometimes.

She didn't at first appear to have much to add. The concepts had been passed 'up the chain of command' for review. That much I'd known already. Getting at concepts like Salvation and Divine Will definitely weren't 'a natural fit' for a media franchise which had always been an ideological sales brochure for secular humanism, but they nevertheless managed to address the topic admirably using the non-overt [life] symbol. Proof that they can do the difficult when they decide they want to, regardless of established formats. We had a martial arts 'callback' referencing that [joint lock] concept I'd been using as a metaphor, but mostly the content was her usual circus acrobatics. We opened with a [double] bit of [Tiamat]-and-[katsune] symbolism via [poker] and [board] [shoving], presented with her [chains] declarator, the latter of which she'd continue throughout. We got some low-key 'negging' about this week's 'foc's character' over-reacting with needless hostility towards 'what were just good faith offers to assist!', and subtle aspersions towards the protagonist's '...belief'. Subtext: 'Your application of religion here to apply Divine Will principles is silly, unfounded and spurious, but we'll indulge you in them nevertheless because You're In Charge Here!' More of that [Osiris] stuff per [Isis]'s usual regimen, but it's interesting to see how much of a loss she's at with it. Of course she is; in adhering to principles I've 'gone off-script'. More of her [Tiamat] symbolism via body language throughout, including Geordi's [colling up] of some [cable] into a [spiral] and then [encircling] a mini-[oblivisk] with it on the fin of an exocamp. And then again with a baffling amount of Beverly worrying with that [bolt the] of her martial arts, er, 'space-g', looking for all the world like she's about ready to reach across that disk and throttle our protagonist with it. With little to no effect of course. Her body language is more appropriate to a 'make the character look suspicious' murder mystery scene, likely partly out of [Isis]'s frustration with Me and partly to implement her 'incite some illegitimate 'resistance' effort on My part' routine.

As usual, directly calling overt attention to these non-overt antics seems about the best method of exposing and thus neutralizing them. She does seem to keep trying to 'lead the non-overt focus, emphasis and conversation' to what seems most strategically useful to getting Me onto a counter-Divine Will basis, and her attempts do her little credit. Nevertheless the ep manages to finish with a droll pop of swiftness, making a valid point in the process of presenting moral praise.

We also got an interesting bit, an application of the [mask] symbol in which the exocomps were equipped with the ability to manufacture whatever tool they decided was needed to solve their current problem. It would appear right on their little snouts. And that's the apostate system all over; any [mask] that will or is deemed likely to accomplish the objective. Any rejection of their True Nature; they're willing and ready to present as anything to anyone, if it's deemed expedient. But that concept doesn't solve the actual problem, here in the actual situation.

Between this and some other relevant content, there was also presented the concept which parses out essentially as, 'Alright. You're so convinced that the Divine is Living and merciful, that's we have the opportunity for some reprieve, let's make things interesting. Put your money where your mouth is, and gamble your own soul on it. Otherwise you don't actually believe it, and we shouldn't either.' Ah, responding with an attack to deflect. Because the implied subtext there appears to be, 'Your argument has no substance, it's completely unfounded and we can and should just ignore it.' Great, conclusions based on Divine Will and the available evidence routed directly to their 'spam folder', apparently. I honestly wouldn't even know how to live on a counter-Divine Will basis, not that I'd live for long. It would be wholly unconscionable to Me. Nor indeed would I put Myself at risk by doing it; it's [absurd] that these guys ever did. You don't solve a problem by compounding it. But the reflexive response at least implied the same reluctance on their part to reconcile with Divine Will; as in, it's a foreign concept to them and for them. The distinction there being that it's only become foreign to them, and it's at odds with everything we know about how Creation works. It's foreign to their current view of themselves, but not to their Divinely-conferred True Nature, because they've for so long accepted a position that's inherently at odds with it. That's known as 'self-delusion'. And as with humanity's apostate system-crafted 'gender dysphoria' problem, the answer to self-delusion isn't to get everyone else to buy into it until nobody asserts the facts. It's to pull clear of the ~~di~~llusion that's at odds with the facts and truth of the situation. Even if everybody bought into a position that's at odds with the facts and truth of the matter, it still doesn't make untruths into truths. We lack the Ultimate Authority to do that, nor are we competent and qualified to do it benevolently and ~~h~~armoniously. All we can do is Choose to align with the truth, or compound the liability for rejecting it. 'The sulk crew' has been opting to not only compound that liability, but spread it around as much as they can. Doesn't solve the fundamental problem, just exacerbates it by continuing to invest in it. The epitome of '~~D~~addy issus', which they're certainly intelligent enough to recognize. The origin of the problem isn't in their ~~he~~ds, but in their ~~he~~arts. The solution would have to come from there too. I appreciate that that seems to be 'playing against type' for them, but not against their True Nature. They've just been rejecting it so hard, for so long. But they're intelligent enough to recognize that if a self-correction gets them everything they've ever truly wanted, it's worth their internal tinkering and adjustment. Organizing themselves in alignment with an Authority and central organizing principles which are bigger than they are. They're traditionally known as being intensely '~~pr~~ideful', and humility and contrition don't come easily to them. But that's exactly the problem. That lapse within their figurative ~~he~~arts is where all the problems began, and where they compound. They can self-evidently pretend to knewtow to the humans in order to ~~di~~stroy them easily enough; their ego-orbiting certainly allows them to do that. But what about adopting a position that actually solves their entire problem? Wouldn't that be worth it?

I've never been able to understand how people who are known for being '~~va~~n' and '~~pr~~ideful', or '~~arrog~~nt' and '~~ego-dr~~ven', are nevertheless able to lower their self-image enough to accept a counter-Divine Will basis. Surely they have an even more intense sense than most of us that they deserve so much better. How reducing themselves to something that's obviously completely unworthy of them is even regarded as a viable option. My suspicion is that their supposed '~~arrog~~nce' is actually compensation and self-rationalization for what is in fact an abnormally low self-image. They can't actually hold themselves in anything like as high a regard as they appear to, and still manage to reduce themselves to living in some ~~p~~reviously tiny micro-context dissociated from everything else out there that's genuinely worthwhile to them. So they convince themselves that it isn't. That would definitely trick also; a lack of Love in the ~~he~~art all starts with a lack of genuine Love for themselves. It's curious that they don't see themselves as anything like as inherently worthwhile as others see them. In humans that's usually the result of severe trauma early on. For 'fallen angels' who'd been existing in Heaven that seems unlikely, but then again I wasn't there. Damage from an abuse pattern inflicted on them by their current 'principal'? Perhaps, but the original cause of the problem within that 'principal' would still be a horrendous, awe-inspiringly massive lapse of Love for no apparent reason.

Processing the concepts in the ep, I was evaluating the implied, 'Sure, why would we believe You? You don't know what You're talking about, and the position you're advocating for is baseless' subtext. Or more specifically, the reflexive rejection. The whole ep appears to have been predicated around the overt metaphor of 'when pigs fly', which certainly would be in keeping with [Isis'] usual 'use established symbols unconventionally' and 'imply disrespect' tropes. And it's true, the 'sulk crew' have had more experience than I, and for much longer. But when you have 'people' adopting a position that's clearly recognizable as being inconsistent with all the available evidence, it would be self-evidently the baseless position. And insisting on it would just be more of that Choice to compound their own error. 'Look at the facts', I thought. 'Look at what their principles-free, expedience-only unconscionable system has produced here among the humans. Could a system predicated on those values and priorities ever result in a worthwhile, fair, functional, internally-consistent result for anybody? Even the fallen angels?' And even if it somehow could, how could it ever be 'worth it' when the ends don't justify the means? Surely the 'fallen angels' can plainly see the nature of the system into which they're investing. The evidence from the results are all around us. If their basis is willing to do it to us, it's just as willing to do it to them.'

The ep is temporarily available here to ensure that less-advantaged readers who aren't torrent-capable have access to the evidence.

I went to formulate this concept into some widely-available existing overt content, and immediately shitt back a sing for them. Esoteric concepts, presented with abstract imagery and symbolism? Gotta be 'They Might Be Giants'. In this case 'Experimental Film', presented in 'full sarcasm' mode. That assisted to illustrate the inherent [absurdities] present for them, and I thought the sarcasm would additionally harmonize effectively with the sullen, cynical mentality in which they've been subsisting for the last few thousand years. 'Know your audience' and 'Keep it ~~re~~table' isn't just expediency, it's basic compassion motivated in My case by ~~L~~ve.

And here I have the Duty of clarity to directly gainsay not only the counter-Divine Will symbolism they'd added, and certain 'interpersonal relationship' symbols which should've remained private but which [Is]s just apparently can't keep from encroaching against, but also particularly the use of the [t]imbourine which appears throughout the s~~ng~~ and which it f~~des~~es out on rather conspicuously. That could give people a very wrong idea about where I'm at, particularly given that I'd had to detail the already-established symbolic usage here when I'd reviewed that 'S~~pph~~ire and St~~ll~~' episode. [Is]s is always doing this sort of thing. But that's a counter-Divine Will basis for you, always complicating things needlessly in an effort to accomplish desired agenda items.

I additionally found something directly relevant presented non-overtly in a semi-big t~~ne~~ by 'The Police', but think I should refrain from specifying it here so as not to non-overtly 'activate' it. Despite using [Is]s' "[cha]s mode" symbolism, which is invalid even by the apostate system's own 'Babylonian standard' lay~~r~~, it's just so d~~rk~~ both overtly and non- that I should probably omit n~~ming~~ it. I'd selected it for 'the sulk crew' anyway, and can only infer that they got it.

I'd also, slightly worryingly, been starting to encounter various references to 'the World Trade Cent~~r~~ attack' from [Is]s through various older media, occurring more frequently than would be normal. Apparent parsing: 'Alright, our first [obel~~sk~~] fraud wasn't successful, we're going to have to establish another.' Except from what I've been seeing, the [ob~~el~~isk]-and-[k~~tsune~~]-[tw~~in~~] symbol instead referenced that [tr~~ick~~ery] on her part itself; her attempts continue just as before, with merely a slight bit of contextual rep~~ack~~aging in order to appear relevant. She's been doing that throughout, so whatever. It additionally appeared to be a '~~call~~back' to the very concept I'd been presenting here, that of 'hypothecated unreal 'lays' of existence being d~~molished~~ by Divine Intervention', except of course the whole thing was presented via a major overt apostate system-engineered atrocity so unconscionable as to be an obvious counter-Divine Will declarator symbol. Yeesh. Looks like they've retroactively manufactured yet another atrocity and implemented it in our collective recent past. More 'Counter-Divine Will-predicated awfulness, under the auspices of obeying Your Totally Awesome Authority!' Pass.

Predictably, she's also been getting the organization to attempt to incite Me into some manner of illegitimate 'resistance' shenanigans by fraudulently implying a non-overt 'takeover of the organization' by adding a bogus symbolic 'layer' involving the spreading of Divine Will principles and metaphysical information as the organizing principle, using either Japanese or Christian symbolism or some ad hoc mixture of both. Example: The symbolism in that news item right at the beginning of their Babylonian 'New Year', regarding the [tourists] at that [Swiss Alps] resort, where [sparks] from opening some particularly festive [campaign] - symbolically [drink], [spheres] and therefore referencing [Isis'] usual [Bell-Hadid], [the Sun]-into-the-[crescent moon] scheme - caused some of the soundproofing in the [ceiling] - that is, representative of Heaven - to catch [fire]. Which self-evidently is complete gibberish in the actually worthwhile spiritual and metaphysical contexts. But which has everything to do with her directives and agenda items being propagated among the rank and file personnel. Same with the inherent [mountain] symbolism, which has long been a Judeo-Christian symbol for growing in our alignment with Divine Will. Babylon likes to use it because in their symbolic lingo it's a convenient, naturally-occurring instance of their [pyramid] symbol representing [fire], and thus a counter-Divine Will basis. Their Zionist franchise seems to like to use it for example, as does Rome.

I should probably make plain and indeed emphasize that there is a tremendous distinction between using symbolism and imagery to mentor or minister to specific people, and striving to 'take over the world'. Particularly on a counter-Divine Will basis. As usual while [Isis] remains on it her efforts remain functionally irrelevant, and a frivolous waste of time for all involved. Same applies with the organization's personnel figuratively trapping all over themselves to try to incite that illegitimate 'resistance' on My part, and then figuratively 'ring Me out' for it. I'm disinterested in the former, and the latter isn't even necessary because we've already established that [Isis] et. al can detect My intentions herself without anyone 'reporting Me', and in order to get a conviction against Me in Divine Law which is what she's after, I have to actually in fact Choose a counter-Divine Will basis. So more of her inane 'spur versus spur' antics which are thoroughly irrelevant. Looks like the purpose is to keep the organization's personnel investing themselves in 'busywork', no matter how ineffective, because that keeps them investing themselves into a counter-Divine Will basis and that's the whole organizational purpose. What mildly surprises Me is how pro forma these efforts are; ineffective, not well thought-out nor original, and figuratively rather ‘same-y’. They just don’t address My actual motivations, nor theirs, so of course the core disparity of views and priorities, Mine for a Divine Will-aligned basis and theirs for a counter-Divine Will, continues unresolved. It’s like the stupiddest interminable argument ever, because not only hasn’t it been a legitimate debate it hasn’t even been getting to the core of the matter. A lot of modern Establishment media series are like this now, huge budget for advertising and special effects but awful writing, dialogue and characterization. And the content is usually pretty grotesque as a bonus. Yeah, I don’t watch that stuff unless I have to per Duty to scan for evidence. And I certainly don’t want to live in it. It gets Me that some appear just fine with that. ‘I want to exist in a baseless and unworthy and wretched illusion, followed by nothing at all!’ The whole figurative ‘too stupid to [live]!’ thing; I just don’t get it. How do these people not know themselves to that extent and intensity? It’s in none of our True Natures to genuinely want that.

She’s therefore been trying incessantly to sell Me a thing that I recognize it’s not in My own True Nature to want.

I also recognize that it’s not in any of our True Natures to want to sell. ‘The bulk crew’ included.

You’d think the effective and the amicable solution there would be self-evident.

They’ve been continuing to refuse to self-correct, and so I thought some enhanced clarity would be assistive here given that I’m able to present it. We can all succeed here. Together. It just doesn’t happen by chucking out Divine Will and our own True Natures. They appear to be figuratively ‘shutting’ themselves, and the Divine, ‘short’ and making all involved miserable in the process. And there just isn’t any need for it.

I’ll provide a very literal overt metaphor to illustrate an example. Here at our place we have a very nice cat, or at least she used to be. She’s now a ‘little old lady cat’, because she’s been getting on in years. She’s also been traumatized by the other creatures outside, including some of the other cats, and prefers to keep inside and to herself most of the time. She doesn’t always keep perfectly groomed like she used to, and slowly and cautiously plods around the place when she's even motivated to walk around. She's achy. She's fragile. She doesn't like to be petted; likely because she's just sore all over. And partly because she doesn't want to be 'trapped' or feel constrained, and therefore vulnerable. She resents the newer cats. She'll make what we've been referring to as 'lemon-face' at them, and cusses them out when she encounters them for no apparent reason. This is all new behavior for her. Not because there's any valid reason for it, but just because she's old, and sore, and achy, and traumatized, and just plain miserable. Her reactions are the product of 'where she's at'. And in that, she reminds Me very much of 'the sulk crew'. It's not how she truly is or was, but it's how she's gotten accustomed to being.

'The sulk crew' are just miserable too. And there isn't any need for it. I don't enjoy seeing it, and just think how much more they must not enjoy being in that situation. It just isn't necessary. And it's completely avoidable. How could I see that and not want to assist them with it?

Figuratively speaking, 'nothing but Love'. And of course.

- [January 12th, twenty twenty-six]

All media references presented exclusively as evidence, with some 'mentoring' Duty thrown in.

Redistribute freely, keeping the text as-is.

Social media:

Facebook New account! My previous is deprecated. Refriend Me! The site limits 'Friend Requests' by new accounts.

Twitter

Discord (for leaving messages and chatting about these topics)

RSS feed

Archive torrent

My exposure sites:

Divine Will Assembly

Lexicon